LETTER OF RECOMMENDATION for Haihan Yin

To whom it may concern,

It is my pleasure to recommend Haihan Yin as a student volunteer for the ICSE'12 conference. As an Assistant Professor at the University of Twente, the Netherlands, I supervise Haihan's joint Master and PhD studies since early 2010 and have taught him in courses since 2009. The good grades with which he graduated without any delay show his determination. In the course of his joint Master and PhD studies, his graduation project was aligned with his PhD project from the beginning. His success as a researcher shows in a very early publication, already during his Master project, and two further accepted papers (one of them a conference paper) in the first year of his PhD studies.

Haihan works closely together with the other PhD students and the staff in our group and we experience him as a very friendly and pleasant person. He takes responsibility in supporting the supervision of Master students. In his studies, Haihan works in an independent manner, recognizes and actively solves problems on his own and self-reliantly gets help on problems that are beyond his power.

All communication at the university as well as in daily life, Haihan has to perform in English. He is able to comprehensibly write down also complex facts and discussions. Only for official purposes, he needs a little help for polishing his writing. His spoken English skills allow deep discussions of his research and other business matters, as well as a natural contact with his colleagues and local friends.

In his free time, Haihan is active in the Chinese student union as well as the union of Chinese scholarship holders in the Netherlands. Among others he supports both groups in organizing festivals.

For these reasons I offer high recommendations for Haihan Yin without reservation. If you have any questions regarding this recommendation, please do not hesitate to contact me.

Yours sincerely,

Christoph Bockisch
